

Six degrees

I love this earth, so plentiful, so full of life and love
I love seeing the sun go down, I love the stars above
I love the woods the meadows, the waves upon the sea
Every single leaflet is a miracle to me

Let every straw and seed, let all that fields can give Let all the fish and fowl, let all that makes us live Let every little bird and bee, hear my solemn praise
Let all the life on land and sea be shielded by our grace

A hundred years ago this world was ruled by wilful kings now freedom and peace is what democracy does bring The world has wavered weary under world war one and two and then through a cold war we shivered scared anew

But now we have a different threat, a warming war to wage we can no more deny, we're in the greenhouse age This time we have to face a more elusive enemy whose appearance is the impotence of our society

This war is fought against all those who doesn't want to see who are opposing all we need to do and all that needs to be The heroes of our time do not lie slain on battle ground
They fight by finding facts and then spreading them around/

Mark Lynas has got a gruesome story to tell Degree by degree unveiling our descent to hell although it may seem hopeless, a struggle with no cease remember the fight for democracy and peace
