

The Day of Grace

A day will come, when everything's undone and man will rise in pride and glory there'll be dancing in the street, to celebrate this feat on the day when the dragon's down

And a rain will fall, unto the thirsty ground and the fires of the forests will be fading and ices cease to melt, and everyone can tell a new world is a-waking

And the sun will rise in grace, and bring joy to every face and the colours of the corals will be sparkling and the species that are saved, will rejoice in dens and caves the day when the warming stops

And the former climate foes, will be staring at their toes and the birds and the bees will be laughing and a meter on the wall, shows how CO<sub>2</sub> does fall and the whole wide world is watching

Listen to the wind softly singing words of a world that has agreed and the bells of hope start their ringing and we celebrate the future to be

And the many who stood up whose steady struggle won this climate war are praised and hailed as heroes forevermore

Listen to the tide slowly turning Wash all our worries away We're free from the fire that was burning and from the ashes we will build another day
